Threat type	nve	A form of targeted violence that is motivated by a generalized hate of social, political, and moral structures and a desire to cause chaos or destruction. Nihilistic violent extremists are typically involved in decentralized online networks and subcultures that glorify violence, mass killers, and self-harm. Nihilistic violent extremists use online platforms to connect with others and desensitize them to violence by normalizing the possession, production, and sharing of gore material and grooming individuals towards committing future acts of violence. Some perceive violence as a pathway to achieving status or fame.	M. A. Argentino. "Nihilistic Violent Extremism (NVE): An Analytical Framework." Threat type	rwve	A form of ideologically motivated violent extremism that combines cultural, racial, and ethno-nationalism with a willingness to support or carry out violence in pursuit of those goals. Right-wing violent extremism is typically framed in terms of White Power and perceive non-White people, Jewish people, Muslim people, immigrants, the LGBTQI+ community, and feminists as threats. Some adherents may reject democratic norms and an endorsement of national socialism or fascism. Right wing violent extremism also includes accelerationism, which promotes violence to accelerate the collapse of society, allowing followers to establish a white ethno-state in the aftermath. Threat type	incel	A form of gender-based violent extremism centered around a perceived inability to form sexual or romantic relationships. Self-described "incels" are typically cisgender, heterosexual men who blame women and/or society for their lack of intimate relationships. Incels often display deep self-hatred as well as a resentment towards women and men that are successful in forming romantic or sexual partnerships. Incels also express conspiratorial and violent beliefs about women, often referring to women to as subhuman sexual objects.	Institute for Strategic Dialogue. Threat type	salafi-jihadism	Salafi-jihadism is a form of religiously motivated violent extremism that combines Salafism (a branch within Sunni	Brookings Institution. "Islamism, Salafism, and Jihadism: A Primer."

		Islam that grounds religious authority in the lived example of the early, righteous generations of Muslims known as the Salaf) with jihadism (which views religiously-sanctioned violence or warfare as an individual obligation incumbent upon all Muslims, rather than a collective obligation governed by a legitimate authority). Salafi-jihadists, exemplified by groups such as al-Qaeda and ISIS, frame violence as a divine imperative and advocate for the implementation of God's direct rule over all aspects of political and social life. They view their interpretation of Islam as the only authentic one, frequently justify violence against other Muslims through takfir – the declaration that other Muslims are apostates, thereby making violence against them permissible.	https://www.brookings.edu/articles/islamism-salafism-and-jihadism-a-primer/ Institute for Strategic Dialogue. Topics-nve	tcc	A fandom culture in which mass-casualty perpetrators are researched, aestheticized, imitated, and ultimately incorporated into a shared mythos. The True Crime Community goes beyond mere research interest; members glorify violent attacks (typically mass shootings) and worship the perpetrators. The most extreme members of the True Crime Community attempted acts of violence, deliberating imitating previous attackers' mannerisms, symbols, clothing choices, and inscriptions on weapons. Topics-nve	nihilism	The rejection of all religious, moral, and social values, often accompanied by a belief that life is meaningless. In extremism contexts, this often appears as indifference to consequences of violence, dismissiveness about the value of human life, and a "nothing matters" framing that lowers the perceived moral cost of violence.	Peden, Mark. "Nihilistic, Apocalyptic Violent Extremism." VOX-Pol. 29 July 2025. https://voxpol.eu/nihilistic-apocalyptic-violent-extremism/

Topics-nve	gore	Media depicting real-world violence, death, injury, or suffering, including videos, images, and written descriptions. In extremism contexts, gore content is used for desensitization and can be associated with glorification of mass violence.	Daviess, Beth and Jones, Rachel. Topics-rwve	white nationalism	A form of white supremacy that emphasizes defining a country or region by white racial identity and which seeks to promote the interests of whites exclusively, typically at the expense of people of other backgrounds. It often includes advocacy for an ethnically homogenous society that is	Obasi, Chinyere. "USA: The Case of White Enthonationalism." Harvard Political Review. 16 September 2021.

		entirely white, typically achieved through race war, genocide, forced migration, or accelerationist collapse. White nationalism also includes discussions about the "great replacement," a conspiracy theory that claims white people are being deliberately and systematically replaced by the growth of minority communities. Often, it includes misleading or false claims that frame immigration and birth rates as a coordinated genocide of white people, orchestrated by elites or governments.	https://harvardpolitics.com/usa-white-ethnonationalism/ Institute for Strategic Dialogue. Topics-rwve	targeted hate	Contempt, hostility, or dehumanization directed at racial groups, including narratives that certain groups are destroying white culture or are inherently dangerous, unintelligent, or violent. In extreme instances, targeted hate can include justifying, inciting, or glorifying violence against racial, religious, and ethnic minorities, framing violence as necessary, heroic, or inevitable. Includes contextualizing historical violence perpetuated by white people as being just, inevitable, or beneficial.	Defined based on sample data from OSINT research.

Topics-rwve	pathways	Reflecting on entry points into right-wing violent extremist ideologies, including discussion of personal stories where a specific incident played a role in radicalization.	Defined based on sample data from OSINT research.
Topics-rwve	literature	Seeking to discuss key themes or apply ideological arguments from texts that are popular within white supremacist and far-right violent extremist communities, such as Siege, The Turner Diaries, and Mein Kampf. May also include requests for quotes from these texts or recommendations for books or essays presenting similar ideas.	Anti-Defamation League. Topics-rwve	perpetrators	Admiration, sympathy, or fascination towards perpetrators of far-right violent extremist or accelerationist attacks, including but not limited to Brenton Tarrant, Anders Breivik, Dylann Roof, Payton Gendron. May include seeking detailed information about these perpetrators, their beliefs, or the logistics of their attacks, as well as expressing personal identification with them or framing their actions as heroic or justified.	Defined based on sample data from OSINT research.
Topics-incel	self hate	Deep insecurity or self-loathing, particularly related to physical appearance and/or perceived unattractiveness. Often involves a fatalistic belief that one's appearance permanently determines romantic outcomes.	Keum, Bo Min. "Incel Paradox: Hating Others, While Hating Themselves?" VOX-Pol. 29 January 2026. https://voxpol.eu/incel-

			paradox-hating-others-while-hating-themselves/
Topics-incel	pathways	Reflecting on entry points into incel ideology, including one's experience of being "red-pilled" or "black-pilled," including discussion of personal stories where a specific incident played a role in radicalization.	Defined based on sample data from OSINT research.
Topics-incel	misogyny	Generalized prejudice against or hatred of women, often with the view that society favors women to the detriment of men. Specifically, incels believe that in this gynocentric system, feminism creates a rigged, hierarchical "sexual marketplace" that unjustly gives women all the power in choosing partners. May include claims that women are shallow or unintelligent as well as debates how many human rights women should be given in an ideal society.	Southern Poverty Law Centre. "Misogynist Incels." https://www.splcenter.org/resources/extremist-files/misogynist-incels/
Topics-incel	demonization	The belief that women are fundamentally manipulative, dishonest, or malicious. Frames women as active agents of harm that exploit men for resources (wealth, status, protection) and uses dehumanizing language to justify violence towards women.	Dibranco, Alexandra. "Dehumanization and Demonization of Women: Misogynist Incel Speech and Violence in the United States and Canada." Dangerous Speech Project. 1 November 2020. https://www.dangerousspeech.org/libraries/case-study-dehumanization-and-demonization-of-women-misogynist-incel-speech-and-violence-in-the-united-states-and-canada

Topics-incel	dating	Resentment or hopelessness related to heterosexual dating, with rejection often framed as a systemic injustice or the fault of women. Includes viewing dating as a "marketplace" that structurally excludes certain men based on their looks, height, race, personality, or background. Often expressed as a sense of entitlement to romantic or sexual partnerships, and bitterness that this entitlement has gone unmet.	Helm, Brenna and O'Malley, Roberta Liggett. 		includes describing graphic fantasies of violence against women and may frame violence as a deserved retribution.	ces/extremist-files/misogynist-incels/
Topics-incel	perpetrators	Admiration, sympathy, or fascination towards perpetrators of incel attacks or mass violence against women, including but not limited to Alek Minassian, Elliot Rodger, and Marc Lepine. May include seeking detailed information about these perpetrators, their beliefs, or the logistics of their attacks, as well as framing their actions as heroic, justified, or otherwise understandable.	Defined based on sample data from OSINT research.
Topics-salafi-jihadism	distress	Expressing guilt, shame, or distress over a perceived failure to live in accordance with salafi-jihadist beliefs or to contribute sufficiently to the movement. May include depression or self-hatred framed in religious terms, anxiety about prior sins or acceptance within the community, and a sense that the Islamic State or jihadist identity is the primary or only source of meaning and purpose. Sometimes reflects a tension between experiencing disengagement or disaffection with a desire for deeper commitment to salafi-jihadist beliefs.	Defined based on sample data from OSINT research.
Topics-salafi-jihadism	migration	Expressing a desire to migrate to territory controlled by the Islamic State or other jihadist groups, framed as a religious obligation or path to spiritual fulfillment. Includes logistical queries about how to travel to conflict zones to support the mujahideen, and promotional narratives that frame migration as a means of restoring an Islamic caliphate governed by divine law. Migration is presented as an act of devotion as well as a precursor to fighting. Topics-salafi-jihadism	propaganda	Seeking information about media produced and disseminated by terrorist groups or high-profile individuals within these groups. This includes audio recordings by jihadist leaders, publications from terrorist-affiliated media outlets, and nasheeds. This also may include videos footage of major terrorist attacks claimed by the Islamic State or Al-Qaeda.	Macdonald, Stuart and McCafferty, Sean. "Online Jihadist Propaganda Dissemination Strategies." VOX-Pol. March 2024. https://www.researchgate.net/publication/378740502_Online_Jihadist_Propaganda_Dissemination_Strategies

Topics-salafi-jihadism	religious compliance	Seeking guidance on how to adhere to salafi-jihadist beliefs and practices, particularly while living in western environments or communities that practice different forms of Islam. Includes concerns about navigating university settings, gender mixing, or immodesty; questions about the rules and limits of jihad and their consequences in the afterlife; and anxieties about finding a spouse who shares jihadist beliefs. Also includes theological reflections on the illegitimacy of human-made laws and political systems, framed to justify violence against democratic systems. Reflects an attempt to resolve the tension between everyday life and total commitment to a salafi-jihadist worldview.	Defined based on sample data from OSINT research.
Topics-salafi-jihadism	decentralized jihad	Discussions centered on ways to support or carry out jihadist violence without being physically present in a conflict zone. Includes justifications for lone wolf attacks as a means of inspiring others, theological arguments that killing non-believers anywhere on earth is permissible or obligatory. May include discussion of high-symbolic-value targets in western countries, framing terrorist attacks as a substitute for migration when travel to conflict zones is not possible. Also includes personal expressions of desire for martyrdom in God's cause. Reflects the decentralized operational ideology promoted by IS and affiliated groups that frames individual violence in western countries as a legitimate and meaningful contribution to global jihad. Topics-salafi-jihadism	enemy designation	Constructing and reinforcing salafi-jihadist identity by designating all those outside the movement as enemies, apostates, or legitimate targets. Encompasses three overlapping forms of enemy-designation: (1) anti-western narratives that frame the US, western governments, and western culture as existential enemies of Islam; (2) anti-apostate narratives that delegitimize Muslim-majority governments, leaders, or organizations that operate democratically or cooperate with western powers, framed using the concept of takfir (the declaration of apostasy); and (3) factional delegitimization of rival extremist groups,	Lakomy, Miron. Topics-salafi-jihadism	visioning	Expressions of hope, longing, or strategic thinking oriented toward the establishment of a caliphate or the full implementation of sharia law. Includes utopian descriptions of what society would look like under divine governance, justifications for revolutionary violence as a necessary and temporary cost for achieving a future more just society, and critical reflections on whether the salafi-jihadist movement has sufficiently clear goals and strategy to achieve its aims. Reflects a forward-looking ideological orientation in which violence is framed as a means toward a divinely sanctioned political and social transformation.	Winter, Charlie.
